THE PLYMOUTH BETHEL.

Mrs. Kettell's Strong Charge Against Rev. Frank L. Smith.

THE STORY AS SHE TELLS IT.

Alleged to Have Been Drugged and Outraged.

HER LETTERS FROM THE PASTOR

The Examining Committee Satisfied of His Innocence.

The scandalous charges made against Rev. Frank I. Smith, the missionary of Plymouth Bethel, by the young widow, Mrs. Mattida Ketteil, formed a promiopic of conversation among the gossips of Brooklyn yesterday. While the friends of Church and of the accused scout the statements of the lady ence, others as warmly ospouse her cause and point to the circumstantial precision of her apparently ingenuous story before the committee, as published in the Herald of yesterday.

When the writer called at the residence of Mrs. Rettell, at No. 259 High street, Brooklyn, on Thursday any information relating to the charge of seduction co, it was said, she had preferred to the superintendent of the Bethel Sunday School, against Mr. Smith. The subject was a most unpleasant one, and they manifestly shrank from the idea giving it publicity. Statements made behalt of the accused, however, which Mrs. Kettell says are cruelly untrue and alculated to degrade her in the public estimation, have aroused her to assume the defensive, and this mood she was found last evening her mother's residence. Having previously counselled with her brother, who was present, as was also ber aged mother, Mrs. Kettell expressed her entire willingness to relate the story of her alleged wrongs to the HRRALD representative. Beere doing so, however, she said that in regard to the island, as published in these columns yesterday, when Mr. Smith asked the landlord for a room and the latter replied that he had no room except one with a Mr. Smith said, "That would do." She, bowever, instantly arose and said, "No, sir, I won't go into any room; let us go away and go home." Whoreupon, she says, Mr. Smith paid the bill and they left the hotel. Mrs. Ketteil also denies that Mr Smith's father accompanied her home on last Tuesday gentleman followed her home and remained some time at the house asking her mother and hersoli not to say anything further about the charge against his son. Mrs. Keitell then, in a modest manner and with tears coursing each other down her cheeks, gave the substance of the statement made before the committee of the Bettel Sabbath school teachers, as follows:—

RENTEMENT.

On Decoration Day of last year Mr. Smith asked me to meet him at the corner of Broadway and Fourteenth street, at half-past one P. M. I did meet him a little later in the afternoon, as he had waited for me. When she met me he said, "I am almost starved; let us go and lave something to eat," I told him I was not hungry. "Never mind," he said, "go with me for company." There was a parade of soldiers passing Union square at the time and we stopped a few minutes to look at them. He then said, "let us go; I know a nice hotel over here, and it will be more pleasant to go there and have something to eat than to stand here." I saked him if his motives were pure in wanting to take me there, and he assured me that they were and that I should return just as I went. I accompanied him to the West Said Hotel, and we went up stairs at his urgest solicitation, as he said he preferred that we should be in a room slone. We were shown into a very pleasant room having a small room adjoining. I would here state that to reach this we had, I think, to ascend two flights of stairs. The turniture was upholstered in a sort of ree plush or veivet, and the floor was covered with Brussels carpet. There were also a sofa, a large easy chart and a marble top table in the room. I asked Mr. Smith what the small room was for; at the rame time I walked toward the door in order to see what It contained, Our lunch was brought up and placed on another smaller table in the room. He ordered a bottle of Scotch ale for me and a bottle of wine for himself. I cannot remember the kind of wine he ordered. He ste heartily and I partook of nothing but a piece of strawberry shortcake. When the water had drawn the corks from the two bottles, Mr. Smith said to me, "Pass me your glass," He poured out a glass of ale for me, and before he passed it over ne took out his memorandum book and was Mr. Smith in the acte through it when he handed have a little slip of paper, asking me to read it; at the same time he appeared to be looking carefully into the memorandum book.

After reading the slip of paper I looked up suddenly and saw Mr. Smith in the act of folding a small piece of white paper which he at once placed in his pocket. He then handed me the glass of ale which he had kept near him and told me to drink it quickly before the foam all died away. I drank half of it and ate a small piece of shortcake. Then I drank the remainder of the ale. I then became very talkative, and I said "I'm afraidethis is going to make me drunk." "Ob, uo," he said, "drink it up and have some of my wine." I began to experience a feeling of numbiness creeping over me. I rose from the table and went to the lounge, saying, "Ob, I'm so sick, I'm so him, but would always be ready to do anything that it would ask. He gave me a glass of water, and we left the hotel.

It was then about seven o'clock and he had kept me there since three in the afternoon. We took a Sixth avenue ear and rode down town. On hearing the Fullon lerry he said it would not do for us to cross together, as he had a friend at the ferry whom he said he did not wish to see us, in company, so he went over ahead of me. I took the next boat, but on reaching the Brooklyn side Mr. Smith had disappeared and I saw him no more that day. The object of his frequent calls at our house afterward was to keep me from telling my mother and brother what he had done to me.

"Have you say icters in your possession sent you what he had done to me,

"Have you any letters in your possession sent you
by Mr. Smith?"
"I have, and you can make copies of them if you choose. Here they are (producing three letters) in the order in which I received them."
The following are the missives alluded to:—

LOGIC WITH A VENCHARCE.

MYS. Kottell continued—MY. Simith says we have no standing, and that we are disreputable people. Now, if we are what he would make us out to be, why did he come here so citen, and continued nis visits after he had been told by my brother and mysell not to come. Why did he take me to his house to see last summer if he thought we were such failed creatures? Why did he take me to his house to see last summer if ne thought we were such failed creatures? Why did he write those isters to me if I was such a person as he now represents me to be? And, by the way, when he took me to his house to see he told me not to talk much with he wife, as she might tell me something that would change my feelings toward him. I was a member of the libble class long before he came to the Bethel, and when I left the Presbyterian Church, on the occasion of my marriage, I received my letter of recommendation to any church as a member in good standing and "a faithful follower of Christ," Whom Mr. Smith wrote the letters from Sulivan county he was on his summer veaction, and they were written in accordance with a promise he had made to me before leaving. The "compact" he alineds to in the letter unted August 23 was made. In July of last year, when he said "he hoped his tongue would cleave to the roof of his mouth" and that "his arms might wither if he broke the compact he was then about to make," This was, he called on the angels in heaven to witness, his love for me, and swore from the bottom of his heart that he would nover leave me, but would desert his father, mother, wife and children, and go with me to California or some other distant part of the country. He then asked me it I would go with him and I said that I never could take such a step, but had not be seen to the some of the country of the committee and the feel o the character of the few. Frank L. Smith, the missionary of Plymouth fiethel. I desire to say that, at the request of Mr. Smith, the parties making these charges were given an opportunity to appear before the others and some of the outest gentlemen teachers connected with the mission, and make their statements as fully as they desired; that at such hearing they were shown every consideration and treated with the utmost fairness.

The gentlemen present arrived at their conclusion partly from the contradictory and inconsistent statements of the parties themselves, and partly from other evidence given my parties of the highest respectability and most unquestionable integrity. These parties fixed times and places in their statements, and it was shown conclusively tout it was impossible for Mr. Smith to have been at the pinces on the days specified.

The days named were to clearly designated that there was no opportunity for any mistake to be made by the parties in their dates. Every gentleman present, when these statements were made, expressed his individual opinion that the charges were utterly disproved and without foundation, and advised that the parties making the charges be required to withdraw from the Heibel. Where Mr. Smith and the parties are theroughly known the charges need no refutation.

I. S. Signor,

MR. SMITH BEFORE MR. BEICHER'S CONGRE-GATION ABOUT THE BETHEL AND MAY-PLOWER MISSION WORK

The lecture room of Plymouth Church was com fortably filled to the evening by members of that fold. At eight o'clock Mr. Smith, the accused paster, occapted the chair at the desk, Mr. Beecher being absent at Montreal. The appearance of Mr. Smith gave rise to considerable speculation as to whether altusion would be made to the scandal, After a hymn a prayer was offered by Brother McKay, in the course of which he prayed that all confessed inquities might be sunk to the bottom of the soa and that forgiveness and Divine blessings might be bestowed upon all present. "Jesus, Lover of My Soul?" was tacen song, after which Brother Abram Hill prayed for spiritual grace and guidance.

Mr. Smith said he wished to talk about a subject with which made members of the church are not familiar. He desired to speak about Plymouth missions work. People who go about the country foll with pride, he said, of the Bethel and the Mayflower missions, but many of those people have never been inside these the provides and schools. They were satisfied that nothing wont wrong. Much more work could be done, however, in that direction it more workers would but come into the field. There are so many means of grace in the mission work which litts up men from degradation and crime to a realization of their unty to God, that it is a lator which strongly commends itself to practical Christian workers. Mr. Smith related several incidents wherein the reformation of tramps, policy players, drunkards and others had been effected by the agency of the mission. The Flower Mission was nighty commended by the speaker, who believed that one hundred fold more could be employed in that branch of the work with interest, The acu'l Beble class and other branches of Christian labor were also commended. gave rise to considerable speculation as to whether
